Dear Fellow Law Enforcement Executive:

Presently, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) offers three national level Law Enforcement Executive Development programs: (1) National Executive Institute (NEI), (2) Law Enforcement Executive Development Seminar (LEEDS), and (3) National Command Course (NCC). All programs are conducted at the FBI Academy by the same high-quality instructors who also teach the FBI's National Academy program.

The attendees at these programs are selected, in part, based on the number of sworn personnel in their agency. For example, to attend NEI, the Chief Executive must lead an agency with a minimum of 500 sworn personnel, and to attend LEEDS, the executive must head a department of no less than 50 sworn personnel. Obviously, this leaves a critical gap in training opportunities for managers of departments which comprise the great majority of departments in the United States, i.e., those having an average number of sworn personnel between 10 and 50 law enforcement officers. It is apparent that even though your department may be relatively small, the demands on personnel and logistical resources, as well as management skills are becoming more complex and difficult to meet.

Community expectations are increasing despite consistently diminished budgets. Population demographics over the next several decades will radically alter the way your department measures its needs to meet its responsibilities to the community. These responsibilities, alongside a host of other law enforcement-related issues, need to be confronted if we are to be effective and efficient in the discharge of our responsibilities. In brief, well managed departments, regardless of their size, led by executives who are equipped with the most current information are essential in today's climate.

To address this training need, the FBI will conduct its 31st Annual Central States Law Enforcement Executive Development Seminar (CSLEEDS) from Sunday, September 18 - Friday, September 23, 2022. This training will be a unique opportunity for chief executives who are selected to attend. The target audience is primarily chiefs and sheriffs of departments with 10 to 50 sworn personnel. However, department size and rank will not be the determining factor.

Prior seminars have been overwhelmingly successful, and all attendees were unanimous in their praise of the quality instruction, facilities, and hospitality extended to them. The Lawrence, Kansas Police Department, The University of Kansas Office of Public Safety, and the Douglas County Sheriff's Office, through the leadership of Chief Rich Lockhart, Chief Nelson Mosley, and Sheriff Jay Armbrister respectively, have again graciously agreed to co-host this executive training opportunity. The FBI is deeply indebted to these three very fine departments for their support in this training endeavor.

An application to attend the 31st Annual CSLEEDS seminar is enclosed with this letter and will primarily be circulated throughout Kansas and Missouri. Several spaces in this year's class will be allocated to surrounding states to enhance the regional concept of this training. Only 35 law enforcement executives will be invited to attend the 31st annual CSLEEDS. The class size is limited to this number due to instructional considerations which require close interpersonal dialogue and class involvement between the instructors and attendees.

Subjects under consideration for presentation during CSLEEDS are:

- (1) Active Bystander for Law Enforcement (ABLE) Project
- (2) Cyber Crime
- (3) Building a Positive Work Organization in a Negative Environment
- (4) Leading & Policing in the 21st Century
- (5) Team Building and Interpersonal Excellence
- (6) Crisis Negotiations for Commanders
- (7) Ethics
- (8) Executive Decision Making
- (9) Media Training for Law Enforcement Executives
- (10) Physical & Mental Fitness Training for Law Enforcement Officers
- (11) Utilizing FBI programs (CARD, ERT, CAST, etc.)

The instructor cadre will consist primarily of FBI Academy and FBI Kansas City staff.

The establishment of CSLEEDS within the central region of the United States will fulfill the FBI's goal of broadening the availability of quality executive training to a select target audience not covered by other existing programs. The Kansas City Division strongly solicits your support in this endeavor. It should be noted that graduates of CSLEEDS become members of LEEDA (Law Enforcement Executive Development Association)-a group that meets annually at the FBI Academy, Quantico, Virginia, for additional training. The first year of membership in LEEDA is paid by CSLEEDS upon completion (a $50 value).

Enclosed is an application and an administrative information sheet. If you have an existing resume you may submit it along with your application. Please indicate how many times you have applied to CSLEEDS.

To allow for an orderly administrative progression, we are asking that only the application portion of this document be returned no later than June 3, 2022. Please submit completed applications via email to TJohnson9@fbi.gov or by mail to the following address:
