About the Course

Every officer who makes arrests, conducts searches of any kind or detains anyone for the purpose of questioning them must thoroughly understand the parameters set forth by the Fourth Amendment related to search and seizure. A lack of that understanding gravely jeopardizes cases and exposes you and your department to expensive legal liability.

This course is designed to give law enforcement professionals of all ranks a complete understanding of the Constitutional parameters that apply to search and seizure.

Among other topics, Captain Jeff Davis, an attorney and Fourth Amendment expert with the Ohio State Patrol, will approach, in an extremely practical and understandable fashion, topics like:

- Citizens' reasonable expectation of privacy.
- Non-physical and physical intrusions.
- Legal requirements to launch an investigation, execute arrests, conduct searches.
- What constitutes reasonable, articulable suspicion and probable cause.
- Handling drivers and passengers during traffic stops.
- Legally extending stops for the purpose of investigation.
- Plain view, plain smell and K9 sniffs.
- Pat downs, frisks and plain feel...and much more.
